

Glorious day out

27 May 2008

Residents from Amana Living enjoyed a fabulous day out at the theatre watching the highly acclaimed performance of Glorious.

This was made possible by a unique partnership between Amana Living and a leading performing arts company, Perth Theatre Company to bring enrichment to lives of the residents of Amana Living and to make arts events more accessible to people.

Frank who hasn't been to the theatre for years said "this is the first time I have been back to the Maj since 1950. I saw Mutiny on the Bounty back then but this was much better, I have had a great day out".

Tony Bonney, General Manager of Perth Theatre Company said "we are proud to play a part in this special event that reinforces our commitment to providing theatre and entertainment for all members of our community".

Reinforcing Amana Living's philosophy of enrichment, CEO Ray Glickman, said "it's such a pleasure to be able to make a difference to the daily experience of our residents and clients and help them truly live the second half of life". Ray then added "a glorious event like this could not happen without significant coordination, planning and dedication of our staff, volunteers and of course the Perth Theatre Company".

Amana Living offers residential care, community care, retirement living and other services to some 3000 older people from 20 locations in WA.
